Kōrero Whakataua Introduction

The Bay of Plenty District Health Board has a strong commitment to developing a health and disability workforce that is able to meet the evolving health challenges faced by communities in the Bay of Plenty.

He Korowai Oranga establishes the requirement to increase the capability and capacity of Māori Providers to deliver effective health and disability services for Māori and to increase the number and improve the skills of the Māori health and disability workforce at all levels.

Similarly, Raranga Tupuake, the Ministry of Health Māori Health Workforce Development Plan 2006, provides broad goals that encourage the increase of numbers of Māori in the health and disability workforce, the expansion of the skill base of that group and access to training for Māori.

To build upon this strategic platform, the BOPDHB has developed Korite - The Bay of Plenty District Health Board Māori Workforce Development Plan which describes the goals for Māori workforce development in the Bay of Plenty. Korite reflects national workforce development goals and considers the unique requirements of the communities within the Bay of Plenty.

In recent years, the Bay of Plenty District Health Board in conjunction with Te Rūnanga Hauora o Te Moana a Toi, Māori Health providers and Māori communities have implemented a range of strategies designed to contribute to the reduction of disparities for Māori in the Bay of Plenty. Specifically, He Ritenga: Treaty of Waitangi Audit Tool, He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua: Tangata Whenua Determinants of Health Framework and Iwi Health Planning are all initiatives that recognise the contribution of Māori knowledge, skills and institutions to the fabric of health and disability activity in this region. Although each of these initiatives has its unique features and functions, they collectively represent the arrangement between the BOPDHB and Iwi in Te Moana a Toi to work collaboratively at all levels of health service provision.

Korite - The Bay of Plenty District Health Board Māori Workforce Development Plan, is fundamentally informed by these previous initiatives and seeks to reflect their principles within the context of Māori workforce development.

Korite - The Bay of Plenty District Health Board Māori Workforce Development Plan, arrives at an interesting stage of Māori health development in the Bay of Plenty. Recent initiatives by the BOPDHB and Te Runanga Hauora o Te Moana o Toi have provided a platform for a greater level of health service participation by the traditional institutions of Iwi and hapu. This plan must serve to enhance that participation in the context of workforce development. It must be mindful also of those Māori health provider organisations that have long been the health delivery experts on behalf of their Iwi and seek to grow the capability and capacity of those organisations in the context of workforce development.

Similarly, Korite should provide opportunity for those who are practitioners within the DHB organisation itself and ensure that Māori are appropriately represented at all levels of the District Health Board.

He Ritenga and Māori workforce development

The He Ritenga Treaty of Waitangi Audit Tool provides a mechanism for the assessment of non Māori health service providers against specifications linked to the principles of the Treaty of Waitangi.

The relationship between this tool and workforce development is that it provides an opportunity to identify those areas of health and disability service delivery that provide for improvements to Māori health status and those areas that require continued improvement.

He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua and Māori workforce development

He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua describes the imperative features of the state of TOIORA - optimum health and wellbeing.

It provides also a kaupapa Māori framework that guides decisions relating to the provision of Māori health services and the relationship between stakeholders to the achievement of the state of toiora.

In the context of Māori workforce development, He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua is concerned about Māori in the health system. He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua is concerned with the issues of Māori skill and knowledge throughout the sector, the sources of staffing and personnel, the role of tangata whenua in health training and education, the opportunity for Māori professional movement within the sector and the role of the Māori community in health service provision.

Iwi Health Planning and Māori workforce development

Iwi Health Planning recognises that the health aspirations of Iwi and Hapū are not necessarily congruent with those that inform national health strategy as they are the aspirations of two different groups.

Iwi health planning ensures that Iwi health priorities as determined through Iwi research processes inform the planning and decisions of the Bay of Plenty District Health Board.

Decisions regarding the specific health activity of Iwi are always made in consideration of all the other social features that impact upon Iwi. Health decisions are not made in isolation of decisions regarding education, housing, employment, justice etc.

Korite will have an integral part to play in relation to the research and development processes that support Iwi health plans.

Māori knowledge, skills and personnel at all levels of professional health service delivery within the district health board and the community.

Vision

The Framework

The Korite framework is built upon three strands.

- Māori recruitment to the health and disability sector
- Māori within the sector
- Māori health workforce and the Māori community

The three strands are matrixed against three key themes that support the place of Māori knowledge and skills in workforce development, the role of Māori in the description of workforce activity and support for Iwi research as part of the health planning process.

- Dual Competency

This theme provides an opportunity inside the plan to begin to describe specifically the status and function of Māori knowledge inside the health sector. It discusses the place of Māori knowledge and practice in the Māori health sector and the wider health sector. It suggests that Māori knowledge and practice has a currency for all health practitioners in the health and disability sector, not Māori alone, and offers an opportunity to explore the place of Māori knowledge and practice in all health curricula.

- Relationships With Māori Communities

This theme recognises that the previous BOPDHB and Te Runanga o Te Moana o Toi initiatives, He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua and Iwi Health Plans, requires an enhancing of the relationships between the BOPDHB and the range of Māori communities in this region. These initiatives focus on a greater level of participation in and contribution to the planning and resourcing decisions made by the BOPDHB and this theme provides an opportunity to describe the type of workforce development relationship that can be developed between the BOPDHB and the range of Māori communities including Māori in the DHB, Māori health provider collectives and Iwi health organisations.

- Data gathering, research and development

This theme allows for specific support to be given to those Iwi groups who are attempting to develop Iwi Health Plans in accordance with their arrangements with the DHB. It recognizes that Iwi view health status as holistic (as described in the He Pou Oranga Tangata Whenua Framework) and that for many Iwi, Iwi Health Plans command a level of research expertise and processing that will be new. Consequently, access to health data and support in research will be required.

Within the strand/theme matrix, the goals for Māori workforce development are identified. The framework provides a third axis that recognises the national themes of workforce recruitment and retention. These themes underpin the Korite framework.
